

Herrick is significantly strengthening its Commercial Litigation Practice Group with the promotion of William R. Fried to partner.

Bill Fried practices general commercial litigation with an emphasis on construction, real estate and business divorce disputes. He has extensive trial and appellate experience in state and federal courts. In addition to handling complex litigation matters for business clients, Bill counsels clients through negotiations, mediations, and arbitrations as an alternative to litigation. Herrick's clients rely on Bill for his tenacity and resourcefulness to resolve difficult and intricate disputes.

Bill has long been counsel to owners, sponsors, developers, design professionals, construction professionals, contractors and condominium boards in all types of construction and real estate issues and disputes. He serves some of the most prominent construction and real estate professionals in the industry.

Commercial Litigation Practice

You're not in the business of litigation, and we'll work with you to avoid it, win it, or use it to your advantage in whatever manner best meets your business needs. We defend and prosecute the full array of commercial disputes — from routine contract disputes to complex commercial litigations — at the negotiating table, at trial, and on appeal. We also offer you our expertise in business divorce, a field we helped to pioneer, and in alternative dispute resolution.

Herrick, Feinstein LLP
