Travis Allen is an associate in Herrick's Real Estate Department where he focuses on development, acquisitions, financing and condominium law transactions throughout the United States.

Travis has experience representing developers and property owners with complex development projects, property acquisitions and sales and development rights transfers. He also has experience representing lenders and borrowers with financing transactions, including construction and capital improvement loans.

Additionally, Travis has experience representing developers in the preparation of large-scale condominium offering plans, the subsequent sale of condominium units and related regulatory filings with state and federal agencies, in particular, the New York Office of the Attorney General, Real Estate Finance Bureau.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Travis worked pro bono with the Legal Clinic for the Homeless, advocating for his client in need of short and long term housing solutions. Travis and a team of advocacy groups that he helped put together, worked to find a safe bed for his client while pursuing a more permanent solution.
